

Sewing Circles

Friends often tease me because I feel that most sewing is easy, and when telling you about a method, sometimes make it sound simpler than it is.

BECKY

But I have frequently pointed out that to do some things correctly or well, it takes extra work and care. This is particularly true when you make a lined garment.

There are many "musts" in applying a lining. One of them is that you avoid beginning on a very complicated garment. When you have made enough things successfully that you feel brave, and want to try lining something, I suggest you start with a skirt or a vest. You may use the same pattern, if a lining pattern is not provided. On many patterns, you'll see the words, "for lining, cut away here."

If you plan to line half the back of a skirt, to avoid stretching, be sure to allow about an inch extra width, and dart the two materials as one. And pre-shrink that lining!

Another good idea is to baste together any two materials you intend to sew as one. Linings slip very easily, especially down long seams, and pinning may not be sufficient. Also, be sure to lessen the pressure on your sewing foot to avoid pushing the lining ahead when sewing it with wool.

When you are ready to line a suit jacket, you'll find you've bitten off quite a job. At the neckline and down the facings, lining must be applied by hand, with invisible stitches (I call this a "dip-stitch" as you do it by dipping your needle under one thickness of the material). These areas are not difficult, if you have made your notches or traced markings clearly, but the armhole is a bit of a terror.

The jacket bodice is lined first, and seam binding tape stitched around the armhole just inside the seam allowance on the inside (over the lining). Then the sleeve and its lining are joined at the wrist, and the outside of the sleeve sewn into the armhole. The lining must be put into the armhole by hand.

Pinning the sleeve at top, sides and bottom, the material must be eased around the armhole, over the tape, with tiny stitches.

It takes practice to perfect this technique, but if you'll keep taking just a little bit bigger bite of the sleeve lining than you do of the bodice, it will even out nicely. Soon you'll take pride in what you have learned, and want to line everything.

TODAY'S HINT:

The first time you try anything, whether it be a skirt, dress or coat, use a less expensive material. If you'd like to try a lined suit, why not make it of some nice, sturdy cotton suiting, lined with batiste? This will be so much easier to handle while you're learning techniques.

WOMAN IN WHITE

By ETHELYN BATTLES, LVN

MAKE AN "ICE CAP" for emergency use if you do not have one. I have found that a plastic produce bag lined with wax paper for extra thickness serves the purpose. Fill it with crushed ice about half full.

Twist bottom of bag, turn, end over closing tight with an elastic band. Press to release air, and repeat procedure at top making a "cap." Invert each end to test for leakage.

Wipe moisture from outside, and wrap in a cloth. Pin to prevent it from slipping off, and apply to area.

Check frequently during prescribed period for changes in color of skin or discomfort as the circulation to the area may be impaired. If unfavorable symptoms occur discontinue treatment. (Change "cap" if another treatment is to be given.)

TO CRUSH ICE place ice cubes in a heavy plastic bag such as a potato bag. Close the top and crush ice with a hammer, stone or brick.

TO FILL A HOT WATER BOTTLE pour hot water into a pitcher and test temperature on your wrist before filling hot water bottle. Fill about one half full or less; press to release air; turn stopper until tight, and invert to check for leakage.

Always cover a hot water bottle. Wrap a towel around it pinning so it will remain in place. A cotton clothes pin bag fits very well if you pin the opening together at the top. Observe area at intervals to prevent burning.

IF AN ENEMA is ordered by your doctor, specific instructions will be given as to the kind and amount of solution and the procedure according to the age and condition of the patient.

The basic procedure for an SSE (Soapsuds enema) or a warm water enema is briefly:

1. Measure one pint of solution.
2. Test temperature on your wrist.
3. Fill bag and clamp off tubing.
4. Lubricate thoroughly tip on tubing.
5. Turn patient on side, knees slightly bent, pad under patient to protect bed.
6. Let a small amount of solution flow into bedpan.
7. Pinch off tubing and insert the tip into rectum carefully.
8. Raise bag 18 inches or

Preceding the reception, a dinner was served to 35 members of the family.

Throughout the afternoon festivities were interrupted by phone calls of congratulations from all over the country.

Married at Shady Bend, Kansas in 1913, the Eberlys have made their home in Torrance since 1944.

Hosts and hostesses at the reception were: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Eberly of Coulton, and Mr. and Mrs. Warrent Durst of Orville.

less above mattress and let solution flow in.

Encourage retaining of solution during procedure. Keep hand on tubing to pinch it off if necessary and to prevent slippage. Lower bag occasionally to make patient more comfortable.

If discomfort continues, clamp off tubing and remove tip. An enema is a simple procedure but involves a careful technique to avoid injury to the tissues which could occur in various ways. A solution which is too hot or too strong, incorrect insertion of the tip, or too much pressure from the solution could cause serious injury.
